

Photo of the Week

Lambert-St. Louis International Airport®

Aug. 28, 2009

“Angels on Sunday”

The Blue Angels Flight Demonstration Squadron takes formation shortly after takeoff from Lambert.

One of the most well known aviation teams in the world swooped down over St. Louis skies Sunday. The Navy’s Blue Angels landed at Lambert after a performance at the Fargo Airsho. The pilots, in their Boeing F/A-18 Hornets, landed for a brief cross-country fuel up en route to their home base at Naval Air Station Pensacola, Florida. Those with a quick eye to the sky Sunday may have spotted the team take formation shortly after takeoff. The Blue Angels are performing in 35 air shows this year.

®

©2009 Lambert-St. Louis International Airport · Public Information Office