“Community Build”

Lambert Director Rhonda Hamm-Niebruegge (top left) and other Airport employees helped build new housing for Habitat for Humanity.

Lambert’s community spirit was baked under intense heat this past Saturday, August 21, with more than 20 employees volunteering to help build homes in North St. Louis. Lambert joined other organizations to help Habitat for Humanity reach its 2010 goal of building 30 new homes in St. Louis. Lambert employees tackled two different build sites for a variety of jobs that included hanging siding, building porches and framing windows. The team worked alongside the future owners of the homes, too.
